

THE CENTER FOR TROPICAL ECOLOGY & CONSERVATION
& ANTIOCH UNIVERSITY NEW ENGLAND

Presents:

What NGOs Want from Prospective Employees

Want to get the inside scoop on landing a job with an NGO?

Where:

Sci Lab I

When:

Thursday April 23rd

Time:

11:30-12:30

Please Join:

Ann Viets

Annie Viets, Ed.D. is an associate professor and chair of the Management degree at SIT Graduate Institute where she has been teaching for the past two years following six years at the University of Vermont School of Business Administration. Prior to her academic career, Annie held senior management and consultant positions with the Hay Group, Fletcher Challenge, Ltd., and Ben & Jerry's Homemade, Inc. Her fields of expertise include human resource management, strategic management and conflict transformation. Currently, she is researching the skills and competencies most sought after by NGOs and nonprofit organizations in their new management recruits.

Annie will talk about the kinds of expertise needed today to manage successful NGOs and nonprofits. She will relate information she has uncovered from research and the World Learning network and the experiences of SIT Management degree graduates as they embark on their careers in the US and internationally.